At a Meeting of Milkmen engaged in the sale of County Milk held at 10, 415 4th-sv., on Friday evening, Sept. 25, 1877, for the purpose of considering the proper course for them to purpose, relating to the gross injustice about to be forced upon as, in the raising the freight on Milk 35 per cent, believing as we do that the rate of freight aircacy paid by us pays the Company as well as any class of freight carried by said Company, a Committee of five were appointed to confer with the Presideat of the Railroad Company, empowered to use air possible means to induce them to have the freight continued at the oldrates. A meeting was called Sept. 29 at the same place, and the Committee reported that the President had emprishedly declared that the freight would be raised on the 1st of October, yet, admitting at the same time that, even at the old rate, 'the height on Milk 33 per cent, the same to take effect on the 1st of October, and as our far new also receive one cent more per

GUY LIVINGSTONE : or "THOROUGH." A

CUY LIVINGSTONE: Or "THOROUGH." A Novel. 12mo. Muslin, 75 cents.

"This is a mostextraordinary Book—the most extraordinary, and the freshest within currecollection, since the first appearance of 'Pelham'." Now, who is the author of 'Goy Livingstone,' we know not; but if living man, except BULWER, could have written 'Pelham,' that man is the author of this fissh and admirable novel. It is one of the most natural books we have ever read; and there is a power and freshness in it, which will render it universally popular."

"Wro wrote 'Gny Livingstone!" We don't know; but if William Makepeace Thackerny, Henry William Herbert, young Robert Bulwer Lytton, and Hariseon Ainsworth had been associated to throw of a novel imprompta, perhaps they might have extemporized some such work as this." [N. Y. Albion.

"This novel possesses all the dramatic force of the 'Wuthering Heights,' by Miss Bronts, and all the spirit of Reade's Christie Johnstone.' It is an extraordinary book in creary respect. The interest is thrillingly kept up from first page to last. Few psendls have such power. We do not fear to pronounce it the most readable novel of the season."

"Spirited and well written." ILondon Literary Gazette.

"One of the most deeply interesting and spiendidly cenceived tales of this prolific age in literature is 'Goy Livingstone."

Buffalo Express.

"Written with wonderful vigor. There are passages in it of an interest as intense as anything to be found in Bulwer."

Brooklyn Times.

MACKENZIE'S MANTILLAS.
From The N. Y. Herald of the 28th Sept.
The New York Herald, in noticing the rich and varied styles of CLOAKS and MANTILLAS in this establishment, discourses as follows:

"In the MANTILLA department we have the rishest Vel"In the MANTILLA department we have the rishest Velvets, the estiliest Laces, and the most extensive Trimmings.
The SULTANA, exhibited by MACK ENZIE, is made of the richest Gross Velvet, trimmed in a novel manner with Chan tilly Lace. The sleeves are of the fashionable shaps, long and full and from the point depends a heavy tassel, while on the freat side are laid four horizontal medalion bands or strape of Castilly lace, graduated from the wrist to the shoulder. This has a light and elegant appearance, and is certainly a most nlessate innevation.

has a light and elegant appearance, and is extended pleasing innevation.

The SPANISH CIRCULAR is likewise composed of Velvet. It has a pretty pointed bood, each point ending in a tassel. One side is leoped up, Spanish style and we have no doubt will be worn by our Lavies with true Spanish grace.

The TURKISH MANYEL, or, Mantean Mussulman, is one of these beautiful creations of taste which are so pleasant to look upon for "a thing of beauty is a joy forever." It is made of Velvet, and has the indepenable hood ending in one point—the only graceful shape for a hood that we know of.

The ORIENTAL is a piquant, gittering style, that attracted much after thom and admiration. It is of Velvet, and is aprinkled ever with buttons that gleam and sparkle with the slightest motion.

est motion.

The FRFZZOLINI—which is as besutiful and will be as popular as its namesake—is made of different materials, Velvet, Cloth, &c. In fact, we have seldom seen a more successful opening.

From The N. Y. Dispatch of the 27th Sept.

WM BUCHANAN McKENZIE opened a superb stock of Fall and Winter Germents on Thursday, and really seems to have surpassed himself in their style of beauty and magnificence Innset in the FATIMA is a large Velvet Shawl, the upper part superby embroidered with all and jet, in a small shawl point which reaches the waist. This is surrounded by a very the fringe ever a quarter of a sard in depth, below which the same splendid design, man fied into larger proportions, is embroidered on the lower part of the shawl in the same materials, and terminates in a second row of magnificent fringe.

The ZAIRE is a very large velvet clear, with wide flowing aleves, and a small double cape, pointed at the center, and edged with bugle-tasseled buttons, three rows of which form a border round the bottom of the cleak.

slowes, and a small double cape pointed at the center, and eaged with bugle-tasseled buttons, three rows of which form a border round the botten of the closk.

The SPANISH CHRCULAR is exceedingly graceful, and of magnifice to proportion. It could to have been called the Vestwall, somehow reminding one of her superior dash and nonobalance. It has no sleves, but is looped up where it falls over the arm with rich tassels; these are also suspended from the four points of the heod, and comprise the whole of the decorations; and, indeed nothing more is required.

The FREZZOLINI, beautiful and modest, steals into our hearts like the fair cantartice after whom it is named. It is composed of the finest French gray beaver cloth, with very wide loose sleeves taid in a plait, and ornamented with cord and tastels. A bread fold of fine drab cheme poptly forms a border, giving the effect of costly plush, with the addition of being much more durable. Drep hattons also surround the hood, which is novel and striking in form. The cost of these garments is race-dungly moderate considering their beauty and the expensive character of the materials of which they are composed.

The ZOREIDE is a pretty mantel for October. The upper poied.

The ZOBEIDE is a pretty mantel for October. The upper part is a small shawl-shaped Talma, with a border of rich guipure worked into jet, placed on the velvet. Below this dessends one or two deep black lace flources, the lower one sweeping the entire skirt.
